Cornwallis Elt strides into The Sunday Times Virgin Atlantic Fast Track 100 List

Sunday 3rd December 2006

Technology recruitment specialists within the financial and investment management sector, Cornwallis Elt, are celebrating entry into The Sunday Times Virgin Atlantic Fast Track 100 list for Britain's fastest growing private companies and entrepreneurs. Making the list for the first time recognises the company's exceptional success and performance.

Formed in 2001, Cornwallis Elt has earned a reputation for its incisive knowledge of the financial markets and extensive recruitment expertise. This is reflected by the fact that Directors Tim Skelding, Andy Johns and Russell McIntyre, each have more than ten years' IT recruitment and financial markets experience and continue to work closely with their clients and candidates.

Explaining the company's success, Tim Skelding commented, "Our 'hands-on' approach ensures we genuinely understand the market we recruit in. This in-depth knowledge gives us the ability to find the best available candidates with a strong understanding of both the technology and business challenges facing our clients.

We concentrate on working with individuals who bridge the gap between the business and IT. They, in turn, play pivotal roles in transforming the ways in which our clients do business."

"Our clearly defined market focus is central to Cornwallis Elt establishing itself as a chosen technology recruitment partner to a number of the City's leading financial and investment management organisations."

From executive search to permanent and contract recruitment, the company has built an outstanding track record in recruiting IT professionals, with roles encompassing Business Analysts, Project Managers and up to IT Director level.

The company's Consultants take pride in their knowledge of their own specific markets and use their extensive experience to guide clients and candidates through the recruitment process.
