

Team Building – Racing J/109's in The Solent!

Monday 16^h August 2010

On Friday the Cornwallis teams took the water for the annual team building day racing J/109's – 35 foot production built racer / cruisers in the Solent, a stretch of water that has seen lots of historical sailing events, not least the first ever Americas Cup, and the world's biggest yacht race the JP Morgan Round the Island Race.

Each boat was led by a professional skipper but otherwise crewed by members of Cornwallis staff and the day was won by a team including Andy Johns, Managing Director, Rich Harrison, Manager of the Investment Banking team, Consultant Jon Price and Researcher Tom Firkin.

Andy commented: "sailing is first and foremost about team work; it is a great way for us to integrate the teams within the business and develop the bond whereby teams can effectively deliver results through everyone taking responsibility for specific roles in the team. Ultimately this teaches us to deliver projects more effectively when we work as a unit."
